The People’s Car

June 22 is Worldwide VW Beetle Day. What has made the Volkswagen Beetle one of the world’s most recognizable and beloved automobiles? First and foremost is its innovative and fun design—a small and compact car with an innovative curved roof, a feature that makes it both aerodynamic and adorable. The Beetle was designed for much more than just fun, however; it was also affordable, practical, and reliable. Volkswagen means the “people’s car,” and these cars were intended to be affordable for all, costing just 31 weeks’ worth of pay. Vintage Beetles sported an air-cooled rear engine, which meant that it did not need expensive cooling units and could reliably operate in both heat and cold. It also got excellent gas mileage, more than 30 miles to the gallon. The car’s simple engine and parts were easy to replace and inexpensive to repair and maintain. All of these reasons made the VW Beetle the world’s best-selling car for decades. The original Beetle was so popular that it was built for 65 straight years from 1938 to 2003, making it the longest-produced vehicle in history. No other car even comes close.

Father’s Day up in Flames

Father’s Day is on June 18, and that likely means that dads will be getting plenty of ties as gifts. The first Father’s Day in America was proposed by Sonora Louise Smart Dodd in 1909, who wanted to honor her father, a Civil War veteran and widowed single dad. On the first Father’s Day, Dodd suggested that all fathers be honored with a rose—red for those still living, and white worn for those who had passed. In France, dads receive quite a different gift: a Flaminaire lighter. Flaminaire commercialized the first lighters in 1908, but it wasn’t until the 1950s, when consumerism began to peak, that the Flaminaire company embarked on an ad campaign linking their lighters to a French Father’s Day. It has been traditional to offer dad a lighter ever since.
